

Pioneers of American Landscape Design Oral History Projects

Pioneers oral histories comprise an ever-growing, award-winning series of videotaped first-person interviews with significant practitioners.

The goal of the series is to make these practitioners' stories available to future generations of stewards, designers, researchers and heritage travelers. The series format examines each designer's personal and professional history, their overall design philosophy and how that approach was carried out in their most emblematic projects. Richly edited, the video segments include never-before-seen archival footage, new photography, and on-location videography. In addition to advancing historical research, the Pioneers of American Landscape Design® initiative fosters a richer, deeper appreciation for often invisible, typically little-known, and, in some instances, threatened works of landscape architecture.

Upcoming Oral Histories:

- The life, career, and design philosophy of landscape architect and author Pamela Burton, FASLA.
- A new oral history module for key associates in the Office of Dan Kiley: Joe Karr, FASLA, Peter Ker Walker, and Ian Tyndall. The module will both document these three practitioners' significant contributions to Kiley's built legacy and capture the atmosphere and chemistry in Kiley's Charlotte, Vermont-based office. In addition to lifting the veil on contributions to such projects as the Ford Foundation Atrium, The Dallas Museum of Art, and Fountain Place in Dallas, Texas, this effort will spotlight the significant careers of Karr, Walker, and Tyndall after their tenure with Kiley.
